The man, Aiden, wakes up, finding himself in the broken car, and he is unable to move or speak. Gameplay The player is Aiden, who has to traverse in the woods, looking for a way to escape. As the player enters each new room, the latter gets more and more light, which allows the player to explore the environment more thoroughly. However, this light also prevents Aiden from hiding or being ambushed. The player can use the flashlight to find objects and climb up walls. The player's goal is to find the toilet. According to the story, Aiden is a man who used to work at an asylum. He had to make a terrible decision and decided to end his life. However, this is only a dream, as the story of The Great Toilet Simulator is a fake one. Reception The Great Toilet Simulator was a commercial success. It earned $2.5 million in sales, being the 21st highest-grossing video game in the country of release. The game was reviewed in the May 31, 2012 issue of Game Informer, and the reviewer gave it a score of 8/10, and called the game "A brilliant, original, and well-executed creepfest that's one of the best horror experiences you're likely to have this year." The game was a nominee for Best Xbox Live Game, Best PC Game, and Best Visual Novel at the 2012 Xbox World Games Awards, and for Game of the Year at the 2012 National Academy of Video Game Trade Reviewers Awards.
